Read the text, and answer the questions below:

April 12, 1961: A remarkable date in human history

A remarkable milestone in human history took place exactly 50 years ago today when Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin became the first man in space. During the flight of Vostok 1 on April 12, 1961, Gagarin, then 27, completed a single orbit of Earth in approximately 108 minutes. His flight begun at Baikonur cosmodrome in southern Kazakhstan and ended with his safe arrival by parachute in the Saratov region of central Russia, where he was famously welcomed back to our planet with a hospitable offer of bread and milk by Anna Takhtarova and her four-year-old granddaughter Margarita.

The era was one of fierce competition between the US and the USSR, with the link between space exploration technology and military technology being all too clear – the Vostok rocket that took Gagarin on his pioneering journey for example, was adopted from a Soviet Intercontinental Ballistic Missile, the R-7 Semyorka.

The USSR had earlier placed the first artificial satellite, Sputnik 1, into orbit on 4 October 1957, effectively starting the "space race" which culminated in the Apollo 11 moon landing of 20 July 1969.

The son of a carpenter, Yuri Gagarin was born on 9 March 1934 in the village of Klushino near, Gzhatsk; which would be renamed Gagarin in the cosmonaut's honor in 1968, the year of his tragic death in a flying accident in a Soviet Air Force MiG-15.

Pollution

All living things need water to stay alive, which is why water is our most precious natural resource. If water was polluted, there would be a draught and diseases, and the average of 80% of soils and pastures would be harmed. For this reason, it is important to learn about the causes of water pollution.

Water pollution is simply any harmful thing that is added to water. There are many causes of water pollution, but you cannot always see what is polluting it. Water can look clear, yet still be unsafe. It can be polluted by microscopic organisms, which are so tiny, they can only be seen with a microscope. These organisms are sometimes contagious and can make us sick. One cause of microscopic organisms in water is sewage from pipes.

Another major cause of water pollution is the fertilizers farmers use to make their crops grow fast and the pesticides they use to kill bugs and rodents. When it rains, these fertilizers and pesticides can wash off into waterways.

In addition, wastewater from factories contains harmful chemicals that can be poisonous to marine life. This wastewater is also very hot, and when it is pumped into waterways, it has the effect of heating up the temperature of the water. Many plants and animals cannot survive if the temperature of the water rises due to lack of oxygen.

Litter also pollutes waterways. When not disposed of properly, garbage shows up on the shorelines of beaches and can also be harmful to marine animals. Moreover, anything with a sharp edge can cut a mammal or fish. Marine animals are also known to mistake garbage for food.

Petroleum companies ship their oil all over the world in large supertankers, but accidents do happen. An important cause of water pollution and a great loss of marine life along shorelines is accidental oil spills by these large supertankers.

Q1. What is one cause of water pollution?

First Aid*Ex1: Write the problem to the most suitable course of action:

- ☐ Frostbite      ☐ Choking      ☐ Broken Bones
- ☐ Burns      ☐ Sprain / Strain      ☐ Bleeding Wounds

A • Remove clothing from the burned areas, except clothing stuck to the skin.

- Run cool (not cold) water over the burn.
- Do not use home remedies, like ointments, butter, etc.
- Do not break any blisters that have formed.
- Do not break blisters that have formed.
- If the burn is severe, phone for emergency medical care.

B • If the injury involves the person's neck or back, do not move them unless they in imminent danger. Movement can cause serious nerve damage. Phone for emergency medical care. If the person must be moved, the neck and back must be completely immobilized first.

- If there is an open break (bone protrudes through the skin) and there is severe bleeding, apply pressure on the bleeding area with a gauze pad or a clean piece of clothing or other material. Do not wash the wound or try to push back any part of the bone that may be sticking out.

C • Rest, ice, compression, and elevation (known as RICE).

- Rest the injured part of the body.
- Apply ice packs or cold compresses for up to 10 or 15 minutes at a time every few hours for the first 2 days to prevent swelling.
- Wearing an elastic compression bandage (such as an ACE bandage) for at least 2 days will reduce swelling.
- Keep the injured part elevated above the level of the heart as much as possible to reduce swelling.

Do not apply heat in any form for at least 24 hours. Heat increases swelling and pain.

D • Bring the person indoors immediately.

- Remove all wet clothing. Wet clothes draw heat from the body.
- Immerse chilled body parts in warm (not hot) water for 20 to 30 minutes until all sensation returns.
- Don't let the injured person control the water temperature during rewarming. Numb hands won't feel the heat and can be severely burned by water that is too hot.
- Call your doctor if sensation does not return or there are signs of frost-bite.

E • Bring the person indoors immediately.

- If an object gets into the trachea and completely blocks the airway, immediately start abdominal thrusts (also known as the Heimlich maneuver).

This can be a life-threatening emergency. If airflow into and out of the lungs is blocked, and the brain is deprived of oxygen, a person can die.

F • Apply pressure to the area with a clean bandage or towel until the bleeding stops. If available, use clean latex or rubber gloves to protect yourself from exposure to another person's blood.

- If the wound is not bleeding severely, clean the wound with soap and water, and hold it under running water for several minutes. Do not apply an antiseptic or anything else to the wound.
- Dry the wound and cover it with sterile gauze or a clean cloth.
- In case of deep cut, seek medical attention as stitches may be necessary.
